“ I' ve known roy for almost 9 years. He was i considered my best friend in the world.
He would always come down for coffee every morning and we would talk about anything and everything. He used to call me red on the phone because i always colored my hair.He would always ask me when the weather would always start getting warm if i had my swimsuit ready to put on and was i ready to go to the beach. He knew just what to say to make me laugh. And i knew just what to say to make him laugh. And my daughter knew who he was and my youngest won't get to meet him. He was a very warm,caring, and sensitive man. I will miss him everyday. I had just talked to him that morning on the phone and invited him to my house for easter dinner and watch my 2 girls hunt for easter eggs. He was excited about coming over and seeing where i live at now. When i moved a year ago i never thought that it would be my last time of seeing not only my best friend but i kinda looked up to buster as a dad also. I don't think that i will ever get over the loss of him nor the day he was taken away from not only myself but also away from all of thosethat loved him. I will always feel an empty spot in my heart.
Hey Roy"Buster"This one is for you my friend.
