“ I remember the days we used to go down the trail that lead to the lake and layed on the beach and swam. The days we went to Solitaires and tore up the dance floor. I remember your cute little habit of rubbing your eyebrow with your finger. I remember the numerous nights I stayed with you and your family and how I met you when we lived in LakeShore Duplexes. We had a blast. I remember how you and your sisters used to slit the tape open on the Christmas presents to see what you got. I remember your 13th birthday on the school bus that morning. I have a vivid memory of the purple pin striped shirt you wore and how I thought how grow up you are now. You were a teenage that day. How cool was that!
